IN INAUGURAL FALL SEASON OF TOM GOLD DANCE

FEATURING NEW YORK CITY PREMIERE

TOM GOLD'S APPARATUS HOMINUS

New York, NY—Continuing its 10th anniversary, Tom Gold Dance presents its inaugural fall season, Friday, November 9 and Saturday, November 10, 2018 at Florence Gould Hall at French Institute Alliance Française (FIAF). Returning to Gould Hall for the first time since 2012, the Company will give the New York City Premiere of Tom Gold Dance Founder and Director Tom Gold's evening-length Apparatus Hominus.

Currently scheduled to perform are Tiffany Mori, Shoshana Rosenfield, Mary Elizabeth Sell, James Shee, and Stephanie Williams. Additional artists will be announced at a later date.

"With our first self-produced fall program," says Gold, "we are thrilled to begin a new tradition that expands our presence in our home city, while creating additional opportunities to share new and recently completed work. We are so grateful to our many supporters: through their ongoing generosity and commitment to our mission, we are able to fulfill this important objective in the Company's development."

"This is a turning point in the Company's trajectory," adds Executive Director Alexander Zaretsky. "Our new season is not only a strong indicator of our growth, but also a direct response to feedback from our audiences to appear in New York City more often."

The World Premiere of Apparatus Hominus, originally for four dancers, took place Friday, July 27, 2018 at TurnPark Art Space, a cultural, recreational, and exhibition center that features a sculpture garden on the site of a former lime quarry in West Stockbridge, Massachusetts. The work, set to selections from Nico Muhly's Drones series and his soundtrack to the 2013 film Kill Your Darlings, was repeated July 28.

Performed outdoors in a stone amphitheater, Apparatus Hominus draws its name from and pays homage to the many objects of metal found across the Park's 16 acres.

Besides increasing the number of dancers for the New York City Premiere of Apparatus Hominus, Gold will add new sections to the work.
